

Vendredi 15 janvier 2010
14h30 - 17h30
Salle de conférences

Débat

Franco-Czech European Dialogue 2010: What does National Interest still mean for the European States?

INTRODUCTION: Christian Lequesne, Director of CERI-Sciences Po
Petr Drulák, Director of IIR, Prague

The problems with the Czech national interest in the European Union
Petr Drulák, IIR, Prague

DISCUSSANT: Christian Lequesne, Director of CERI-Sciences Po

The Czech national interest and the Eastern policy of the European Union
Petr Kratochvil, IIR, Prague

DISCUSSANT: Jacques Rupnik, CERI-Sciences Po

The Czech national interest and global policies of the European Union
Ondřej Horký, IIR, Prague

DISCUSSANT: Anne-Marie Le Gloannec, CERI-Sciences Po

Entrée libre dans la limite des places
disponibles

Responsable scientifique :
lequesne@
ceri-sciences-po.org

Contact : alexici@
ceri-sciences-po.org

The Institute of International Relations (IIR) in Prague is completing a research study on the meanings of national interest for Czech Republic. What does national interest mean in 2010 for a "small" Member State of the European Union? The seminar will give CERI's scholars working the opportunity to discuss the presentations of their Czech colleagues and to make comparisons with the French case and other EU member states.

The working language will be English